Harry Green and Stuart Erwin Carry Comedy in Palace Play.

Harry Green and Stuart Erwin furnish the comedy and in fact carry the show in "No Limit," starring Clara Bow, now showing at the Palace. Green is the manager of a theater where Clara is an usherette and Erwin is Ole Olson, a sailor, who inherits a fashionable gambling house and a Rolls Royce from his uncle.

To make a hit with Clara, Olson turns over his inheritance to her to manage while he is out on his ship and business starts when the girls take over the apartment. Clara falls in love with a fashionable criminal living in the apartment house and marries him. Norman Foster, as Clara's husband, is the one who robs a famous actress of her jewels and after making his getaway returns to confess and turn over the loot, after realizing his love for his wife. The story ends happily with Clara working as head usherette in Olson's theater and waiting for Foster to serve his sentence.

A "Silly Symphony," a comedy and news reel complete the bill. E. S. D.

OHIO SHOWS GOOD WESTERNER

When he made a promise he never broke it. To keep his word to a friend, he marries him to Ynez Dominguez. To keep his word to Ynez he shoots the groom that she may wed her fiery young lover Juan Sebastian.

That's "Captain Thunder," the hard-riding cattle rustler whose picture shows at the Ohio tonight for the last time. Fay Wray and blond and brunet contrast. Hand-blond and brunet contrast. Handsome Don Alvarado will make the young feminine hearts flutter. Victor Varconi, in the leading role, is seen for a long time, is the leading "Captain Thunder."

Of course there's a reward out for him when the picture opens, and Fay Wray, in love with Don Alvarado who has left to capture "Captain Thunder" and returns with the 2500 pesos reward to be married, thinks Captain Thunder so brave that she doesn't give him over to the police, but hides him instead.

Thunder keeps his promise to Robert Elliott to do him a favor at any time, and while Fay is favor married to Don Alvarado, captures Juan, marries Morgan to her, then shoots Morgan, frees Juan and presenting him to the widow with his compliments, gallops away. An improbable story, but it makes average entertainments. H. H.

"UTAH KID" PLAYS MARION

An old-fashioned Western melodrama is offered Marion theatrical devotees again tonight at the Marion Theater in "The Utah Kid," starring Rex Lease and produced by Tiffany. The picture, which is all-talking, opened yesterday. Rex Lease is forced to marry a girl whom the gang captures in order to have her from the bandit chief. To complicate matters, he learns the girl is the fiancée of the sheriff. Later Rex follows the "straight and narrrer" and wins the girl's love.

Dorothy Sebastian is the feminine lead while the veteran Tom Santschi plays the part of the bandit chief. Boris Karloff, who was the prison barber in "The Criminal Code," also has a leading role as Santschi's right-hand man, while Walter Miller is the sheriff. The seventh chapter of "The Phantom of the West," an all-talking monkey comedy and the Pathe news are other items on the program.

Will Become a Modern Pepys and Tells of Airplane Flight From Home in Movie Colony to New York City

Rogers Says That About All Old Sam Could Do Is Misspell News.

BY WILL ROGERS
I used to write a good deal about what I read in the papers. But you know I been reading a lot of these other writers of Sundays, and they write mostly about themselves, and they seem to be doing mighty well, too.

It seems that away back in Caesars or Hellins or somebodies early days there was some old writer called Pepys, and all he did was just write what he did. Well he didn't do much, (but write) for there wasn't much to do in those days. Oh, yes, drink. Well he had some kind of peculiar ways of saying things and his spelling was bad. (I can't personally stand anybody with bad spelling. I am off anybody that can't spell.)

But this old fellow could make nothing sound good the way he laid it on the line. He had two expressions, and if he just hadn't happened to use them, why none of our modern writers could have copied him, for that all they can copy him in, they just use these two lines over again and again and think they are doing a Pepys. One was "Lay late," and the other was "Woke betimes." Well I am going to do some of that "Lay late" and "Woke betimes."

Didn't Lay Late
I will start my trip east from California a couple of weeks ago. The night before I started I "Lay Late." No I didn't, it was two nights before I started that I "Lay Late." The morning that I started I didn't lay so late. In fact I didn't lay hardly at all. I had to catch an airplane that was leaving away over in Burbank Cal. (That's not Burbank home, it's Jim Jefferies) and I was away out at my little ranch about five o'clock and you can't do much "Laying late" and make that kind of a getting away. My oldest son Bill was to drive me, and that meant I had to get up just one hour earlier than usual in order to start trying to get him up. Well anyhow I "Woke betimes." I woke betimes because I had two alarm clocks set for the job, and they both went off thirty minutes early.

Well 3:30 a. m. is pretty tough time to start a diary. Should be working on a diary, and juling a Jersey Heifer at that hour. Well it was dark, and we drove in toward Hollywood, and got pretty near through it before we saw a single car. Hollywood is so wild that there wasn't even a Street lamp burning at that hour. We got to the field. Bought my ticket for Ft. Worth, Texas, had some baggage excess. (I told my wife I didn't need all three of those shits. Stood around about half asleep, and then had a cup of Coffee. I don't do much eating when I am on plane or getting on one. I am mighty easy to get sick. It's a big three, Wasp Motored Fokker Plane. It's still dark when I tell the kid good bye, and to take good care of my Ponies, and to stay off em, and only play his own.

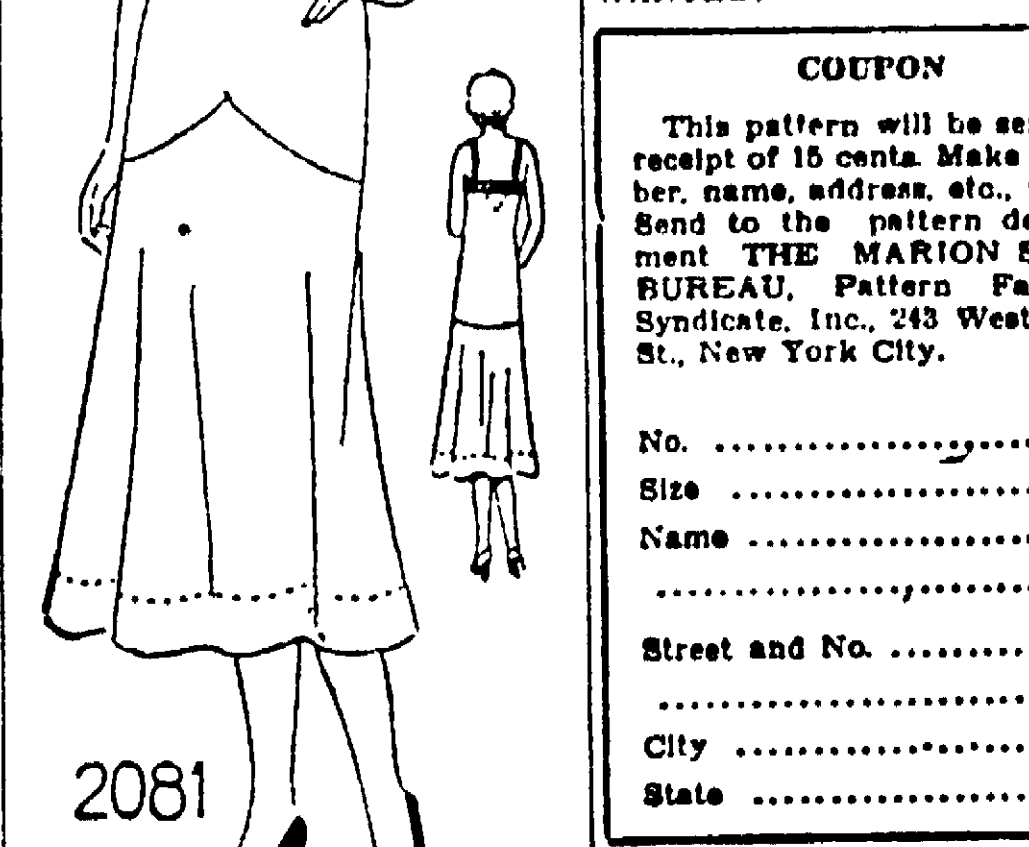

Burbank and Glendale look mighty sparkling like from the early dawn, then out over Los Angeles. Its spread out, well you have to look at it by lights to see how far it is spread out. Then we hit for out over Pomona, and on over through the mountain pass at Banning and the fashionable Palm Springs. Then nothing to see till we hit Phoenix, or near Phoenix where the irrigation lads start in. Those thousands of flat squares are beautiful from the air.

Not Same Old Bag
At Phoenix, was met by a band of Citizens that wanted me to stay over or come back to a big affair where they were going to have a call from Presidents at the Big Shippers Convention, and they was going to have a golf game, between the seventeen and seventeen Vice Presidents were to Caddy for them. That would be nothing new, they have been carrying the bag for em all the time. But it give Vice Presidents a chance to do something. Then the rest of the Audience was composed of other Vice Presidents. But they did plan on having a great time and I hear they had it. They give me a big box of the finest dates I ever ate (Smuggled over from California I bet). Then on down over Tombstone, Ariz. and the next gas stop was Tucson. Another Delagation had some kind of a "Buckit" they wanted me to stop over and enter into. No it was Douglas where this bunch was. It was on the Mexican border. I wouldn't have minded stopping there. There on to El Paso, had lunch, changed Plane, got there about 1 p. m. about three days ride on the train, then started across Texas. Now you have started something. Oh Yea I am leaving out some of these "Woke betimes." At each stop I "Woke betimes" for I slept all the rest of the way. Well I "Lay late" at Big Springs and like to not "Woke betimes" to stay to draw my attention to a story brick hotel that I would pass over as we passed over the town on leaving. Associated Press man there, and he got everything wrong but the name of the Town and misspelled it.

Woke betimes Again
Then to Abilene, (Sweet Abilene, My Abilene, in all my dreams). I haven't sung that old song since 1920. There I woke betimes and Amos G. Carter had a special Plane to meet me to take me to Ft. Worth. For he didn't want me to see Dallas. Had a nice night there, woke betimes, met a lot of nice folks that was going to handle my little Charly tour through the State, then flew up to Tulsa, where met equally as nice bunch for Okla. Then drove my Auto 45 miles to

HARDING BEATS GALION 17-13 IN UPSET

PRESIDENTS BATTLE WAY TO VICTORY IN HARD-FOUGHT GAME

Scarlet Clad Warriors Win Bitter Struggle on Star Gym Court.

BY BOB KIRKPATRICK
Sports Editor, The Star

THIS team that won't be beat can't be beat. That explains the 17 to 13 victory of the Harding Presidents over the highly touted Galion Orangemen last night on the floor of The Star auditorium. Galion never had a chance to win, despite some desperate playing late in the final period.

It looked bad for the Harding outfit as the game opened. Hoekstra, the team's star, was fouled out before the first basket had been made. The basket game the Orangemen a two point lead which they held just about as long as it takes to write this sentence.

Ling Ties Count

Jack Ling, the Harding pivot man, fouled out with a duplicate of the Hoekstra basket and the count. That deadlock was as near as Galion ever came to winning the game.

After using the count at 2-11 Harding immediately assumed command of the situation and put on a first class demonstration of why they are not to be trifled with on the hardwood.

Galion was stopped cold. The passes of the Orangemen worked in back-court but when they got within scoring range alert Harding guards spoiled the majority of scoring chances. The score at the end of the first period stood 4-4.

In the second period the offense of the Scarlet clad warriors started clicking and left Galion standing for the entire frame. The Orangemen failed to hit the net for a single point in the period. The count at the half stood 10 to 4 for Harding. Galion scored but two field goals in the first half and both of them came in the opening period.

Game Slows in Third

The bitter struggle ended up slightly in the third quarter although the contest still moved at a near break-neck pace. Galion attempted to get its scoring guns working but could not get around the Harding cohorts. Harding added a total of five markers to its total score in the period while Galion collected on less.

A wild rally on the part of Galion in the final period of play caused a lot of anxious moments for Harding followers but other than that accomplished little.

Hoekstra Pulls Buzzer

Hoekstra, Galion's towering center, momentarily lost the use of his brain in the final period and added another "Merkle" to the list of athletic "boners." Hoekstra recovered an unsuccessful Harding free throw and battered it through the President's net for a field goal.

With only two minutes to play the Galion basketball opened up with a barrage of long range attempts at the basket which netted them little more than a lot of shooting practice. The shots were for the most part wild and misdirected.

Neither lineup presented any outstanding star in the game. Play was fast and furious most of the time. Harding's floorwork was superior to that of Galion although a number of President plays were wrecked by the much taller Galion boys.

The lineups and summary:

Harding G. F. Gallon Voc. G. F. Pollock, f. 2 0 Kins, f. 2 1 Morgan, f. 4 0 Goldsmith, f. 2 1 Ling, c. 2 0 Hoekstra, f. 2 2 Chy, g. 0 0 Burnison, g. 0 0 Lindsey, g. 0 0 Skahill, g. 0 0 Smith, g. 0 0 Campbell, g. 0 0

Caledonia Wins 25-23 As Martel Rally Fails

BY BOB KIRKPATRICK
Sports Editor, The Star

WITH two defeats already chalked up against them this season Harding High stands little chance to win the pennant in the N. C. O. circuit this season. However, even if no pennant is won Harding may have quite a lot to say as to who does win the flag. The play last night was a great improvement over that of any previous game and there is little reason to believe that it will not continue to improve.

When the season started the team looked weak. In fact it looked pitiful. It didn't look very much better in its second and third games. But since then a remarkable transformation has taken place. The progress has been steady and uninterrupted. There is no reason to believe that it will not continue that way. The boys have gained confidence and are anxious to keep going. It is probably too much to expect a perfect record of victories from now until the end of the year but it is reasonable to expect they will win several more games this season.

It has been some time since Harding has been represented by a basketball team that shows the fighting qualities of the team that beat Galion last night.

With the pre-game odds all against them, they literally refused to be beaten. If a consensus could be taken of the game's spectators before the contest started it is almost certain that Galion would have been an overwhelming favorite. Harding's players knew this but it didn't check their determination to win two games in a row. The result speaks for itself. They wouldn't lose. That's why they didn't.

Next week Shelby will bring its battle scarred warriors of the hardwood here to meet the Presidents in the fifth league game of the year. With them will come the leading scorer in the circuit, Gus Culbertson. Harding's work is cut out for it. Some means will have to be devised to stop his elongated point getter of the Whippies.

Besides Culbertson the Whippies will bring two more outstanding players of the league in Miller and Peters. Both are classy performers. Another first class battle is in prospect.

HARDING WINS

Galion Vocational, Fall Before Better Marion Five, 22-5

The Harding Vocational basketball team made it a clean sweep over Galion last night by trouncing the Galion Vocational 22 to 5. Marion was far superior to the opponents in all phases of the game.

Galion failed to score any points in the opening period and got but one in the second. Kimes registered the only field goal for his team late in the fourth quarter.

Belcher was high scorer for Harding with four buckets.

SHOVEL CLUB TAKES 36-15 COURT GAME FROM TIFFIN QUINTET

Gillis Runs Total for Season to 307 Points in Y-Indus Victory.

THE Shovel Y-Indus basketball club made it three wins in a row and 15 out of 23 played with an easy 36 to 15 decision last night over the Tiffin Business University on the out-of-town floor.

Vic Gillis, lanky Y-Indus forward, led the winners in scoring with 13 points and also pushed his total for the season to 307. He is the first cager in Marion to even come close to 300 markers for the year.

The Y-Indus offense started slowly, several points being lost as the er shots were misfired. The score at the half stood 9 to 8 for the locals.

In the third period the scoring cannons of the Shovel club were trained on the basket and Tiffin saw their chances for victory fade away.

The big scoring feat for Marion came in the final period when Gillis, Osterholt and Gann all hit the basket with regularity.

Tonight the Shovel quintet will engage the flashy Columbus Y Collegians on the Steam Shovel court. The Collegians boast a lineup composed of former players of Carnegie Tech, Purdue, Ohio State and Illinois.

The girls' teams of the Marion Business College and the LaRue High school will play their annual game starting at 7:30 p. m. The Y-Indus game will start at 8:15.

BIG TEN LEADERS TO TACKLE TOUGH FOES

Northwestern, Chicago, Defend Records Against Ohio State and Michigan.

By United Press.

Northwestern and Chicago, first-place rivals in the current Big Ten basketball campaign, will defend their unmarred records tonight against Ohio State and Michigan, respectively, in games which may simplify the question of leadership in the race.

With the two leaders in action against dangerous foes, interest in the third scheduled game, Illinois vs. Wisconsin, was limited to supporters of the two schools.

Northwestern is a decided favorite to defeat the Buckeyes, but Chicago is conceded no more than an even chance against Michigan. Ohio State has been the surprise of the race, defeating both Michigan and Wisconsin, and the Buckeyes are considered the chief obstacle to Northwestern's hopes of an undefeated season.

MORRAL CONTINUES ON UNBEATEN PATH

Pleasant Township Teams Take Double Bill from Green Camp Quintets.

BY BOB BYRD

FAILING by a narrow margin to crash the gates of victory in a three-minute whirlwind rally at the close of the game, Martel yielded a hard-fought game to Caledonia cagers on the winners' court last night by a score of 25 to 23.

With the score 20 to 13 in favor of Caledonia at the close of the first quarter, Martel cagers stepped out during the fourth period to retain possession of the ball most of the time. This final effort was climaxed in the last three minutes of play, but the rally came too late.

Working as a unit, the Caledonia five worked out its plays speedily and efficiently. Martel's passwork built up around Goldsmith, Martel guard, who is no mean ball handler, gained little for Burkhardt, Martel forward, missed an inexcusably large number of attempted field goals.

J. Swisher, Caledonia forward, and Gibbs, Martel forward, both passed efficiently.

Martel girls took a decisive defeat from the Caledonia sextet by a score of 23 to 15. S. Timpon, midjet Caledonia forward, was high scorer of the evening with 15 points. M. Reed, Martel center who has distinguished herself all season with her floorwork and her shooting, was second high scorer of the game with 12 points.

The Timpon sisters, Caledonia forwards, made the evening unpleasant for the Martel visitors. R. Timpon showing flashy floorwork and S. Timpon sinking the buckets when the appropriate moment arrived.

ASHLAND IS WINNER BY ONE POINT, 20-19

Bucyrus Stays in Cellar by Losing to Mansfield Tygers 30-28.

HARD-FOUGHT battles marked the fight for honors in the N. C. O. cage title chase last night as Mansfield eked out a 30 to 28 victory, over the last place Bucyrus quintet and Shelby dropped a thrilling contest to the league-leading Ashland Hippotters.

Ashland High retained the only unbeaten record in the circuit with its win over the Whippies.

Ashland High school continued to retain its place at the top of the heap in the North Central Ohio championship battle by edging out a single point, 20-19, victory over the Shelby Whippies on the Whippies' home court. The Ashland victory gives the Hippotters a unblemished record of four victories in four starts.

Shelby, the 1930 champions of the league were shoved into a four way deadlock with Marion, Harding, Galion and Mansfield for the second place rung on the standing ladder. All four teams have records of two wins and the same number lost.

Gus Culbertson, scoring ace of the league ran into tougher opposition last night than he has been accustomed to and was not allowed to stage one of his usual point getting epres. Nick Dolby of Ashland, who is slated to replace Bob Hybalt as the leading guard for the Hippotters stopped Culbertson most of the allowing him to hit the net for but two field goals. Rybolt played his last game against Shelby. He will graduate at the end of the semester.

The usual stalling tactics of the Hippotters failed to work against the Whippies. Shelby refused to allow Ashland to hold the ball at any time and kept the game moving at a fairly fast clip.

Miller and Peters starred for the Shelby quintet. Thomas and Matthews performed best for Ashland.

MILD SETBACK HITS STOCKS

Market Ends Week of Steadily Advancing Prices; Motors Gain.

By The Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—The stock market ended a week of almost steadily advancing prices today with a mild setback.

A vigorous effort to extend the rally by bidding up the automobile shares was less successful than similar efforts have been in the past, but whatever may be the effects of motor competition in the field of transportation.

The market reflected week-end profit taking at the start, but in the middle of the session, stiffened with a rise of 1 to 4 points in motor and accessory issues. The upturn was only used to liquidate industrial and utilities, however, and the last closed irregularly lower, with much of the advances in the motor lost. Rails were quiet and steady.

The advance in the motor group appeared to be a professional move, based on reports of moderately satisfactory sales, and expectation of improvement with the approach of spring. Reports from the steel industry, however, indicate that the seasonal improvement has been partially checked. Operations in the Youngstown area, which serves much of the motor industry, next week are scheduled for about 48 percent of capacity, a gain of only about 1 point from this week's estimated rate.

Wall street placed favorable long-term interpretation on the report from Brunswick, Ga., that George F. Baker, expressed the belief that it was unwise to go short of the market at this time, permitting himself two statements to the press in a week despite his long-standing rule of silence.

The Stars Say--

For Sunday, Jan. 25

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds promise of unusual liveliness in domestic, social, cultural and athletic matters rather than in week-day activities. These latter are under baneful ray, and should be postponed until more propitious planetary sway. There may be some sudden visitation, not quite desirable.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year in which their personal affairs may thrive and bring compensations, but business conditions are under a sign of adversity, setback and possible disruption. A sudden and disintegrating visitation is possible, finances are hazardous, and delays are among the probabilities. And beware a treacherous and subtle child on this day should be gracious, socially accomplished and popular, but it may encounter many obstacles to surmount. It may have a stirring and adventurous career.

For Monday, Jan. 26
MONDAY'S astrological forecast is under the strong influence of the mysterious and marvelous Neptune, both solar and lunar aspects. The configuration affects peculiar and chaotic situations, difficult to unravel, but favors dealings of a secret or strategic nature, and encourages negotiations with secret societies, large corporations or combines and affairs of intrigue or diplomacy.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of the peculiar, the unorthodox and intriguing. Their affairs will prosper through secret agreements or conspiracy, and negotiations with large corporations, mergers and some bodies should thrive. New projects in this connection flourish.

GRAINS WEAKEN AS CORN DROPS

Report That Feeders Offer More Than Market Fails To Check Loss.

By The Associated Press.
CHICAGO, Jan. 24.—Stop loss selling of corn weakened all grains and provisions early today for the time being. There appeared to be no bull leadership in corn especially, and prices fell despite rural reports that feeders were paying more for corn than terminal markets were bidding. Corn opened 1 1/2 cents down and afterwards showed little power to rally. Wheat started unchanged to 1/2 off and kept near to the initial figures.

Corn went to the lowest price level reached on the present movement. Then resting orders to buy were met with and declines were checked. Chicago arrivals of corn were 122 cars, compared with 118 a week ago and 247 at this time last year. Indiana advice said offerings to arrive were increasing, that there were good sized stocks on farms, and that the open winter had curtailed feeding demand.

Primary arrivals of corn totaled 688,000 bushels, against 700,000 a week ago and 973,000 on the corresponding day of 1930. Bears reported keen competition from substitutes for corn, together with cheap offerings of Argentine corn in eastern markets, making shipping call here. South Minneapolis messenger said country selling overnight had somewhat increased. Oats followed corn, although open receipts in Chicago were less than half of the quantity a year back.

WITH EDNA S. DUTTON

has written another fascinating mystery yarn in his new novel, "The Middle of the Yellow Zurl," published by E. P. Dutton & Co., Inc., and chosen by the publisher as one of their prize "guess who" mystery stories.

The story centers around the search for a yellow Zurl for which the sum of $1200 is offered dead or alive. The rings around the snake's body hold the clue to the discovery of something like $20,000, which, of course, makes it very valuable dead or alive. The money falls into the hand of Clifford Carter, a newly-engineered and agent for the government department bearing the name of the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Chicago, foster brother of Cary Desmond and his sister Marcha. The latter also is his fiancée.

Fortunately the snake doesn't enter actively into the story and the author has a delightful way of carrying his reader into other intricate situations giving no chance to ponder over the reptile. Cary Desmond is a gay young bank clerk who goes arlying on the stock market but who the reader's admiration by making a clean break of his misadventure. Unfortunately for Cary he sold on the market some stocks entrusted to the care of the latter by an Italian woman. The arrival of the mysterious letter containing the $20,000 moves the day but complications enter into the story when Cary gets the whole yarn from a slyster lawyer named Wolf whose deal-lings for the most part are with theatrical folks, and who learned of the value of the snake through Loh, a snake charmer from the hills.

Carter and Cary Desmond interview a millionaire who is interested in finding a safe which will insure him against burglary and who has offered $25,000 for one which gives satisfaction. Cary wins the money and the demonstration of his safe brings out a very happy ending to the story.

"Back Streets" Is New Hurst Novel

FANNIE HURST'S new character thesis, a girl with sex appeal, was told by one who seems new books. She was Ray Schmidt and the novel in which she is presented in "Back Street."

Ray was the orphaned daughter of a German shopkeeper in Cincinnati of the pretty gay nineties. She had "style," she was "tongy." Traveling men liked to take her to beer gardens where nice girls didn't go. Ray went and liked it.

Then she met Walter Suxel, a young Hebrew bank clerk. By helping her selfish stepmother out of a bad mix-up Ray missed a slim chance to marry Walter. But they meet again in New York where Walter becomes an international financier and a respected philanthropist. Ray seems content to live in the "back streets" of his life, thinking only of his comforts and he selfishly accepts everything Miss Hurst writes rather unrestrained and with super-appeal.

Boy Scout Tells of Expedition

PAUL L. SIMPLE, the Boy Scout of Erie, Pa., the only junior member of the Byrd Expedition and the only boy ever to take part in a venture of such importance, has finished his book, "A Boy Scout with Byrd." It will be published by Putnam's Jan. 28. In it the young author describes the making and training of a dog team from a group of discarded puppies, his study of the penguin, his narrow escape from whales when on a reconnoitering trip with Byrd and of long cold days in the community of "Little America." The book covers the entire story of the expedition from the time when Paul said goodbye to family and friends to the day when he was welcomed with the other members of the party by the entire nation on their arrival in New York harbor.

Margaret Wilson Writes on Prisons

MARGARET WILSON, after writing "The Able McLaughlins," "Daughters of India" and "Trousers of Taffeta," went to live in a house on an English prison wall. As she watched passing her workroom day by day all the men in the prison, all those writing and leaving, all the officers of the prison and finally as she watched all the innocent, unconsidered and penalized families of prisoners coming to pay their scanty visits, the name of his book changed from "The Punishment of Crime" to "The Prison of Punishment."

To understand the system of punishment and to estimate its worth, the author first writes its history, comparing imprisonment with what preceded it, stocks, pillories, floggings, transportation, and death and explains how imprisonment spread over the world a hundred years ago.

The Mexicans were easy victims but the gold-hungry men of the North would not be stayed even by torture or death. Finally the great, old Apache understood that he must make peace with these whites and he came down to an American army outpost to make it one and be betrayed and shot down. The novel is published this month by Duttons.

Legislator To Speak on CBS Radio Forum

REPRESENTATIVE CHARLES R. CRISP

Crisp of Georgia will discuss "The House Rules and the Need of Revision" in the National Radio Forum arranged by the Washington Star over the Columbia Broadcasting System on Saturday, between 9:30 and 10:30 p. m.

Those who like Crisp, believe the rules should be changed, charge that the present order gives too much power to the Committee on Rules and permits a stranglehold of legislation approved by a majority of legislators.

There have been frequent attempts to liberalize the rules. One successful occasion was in 1919, when "Uncle Joe" Cannon was the presiding officer. Much of his power was stripped and handed to the Rules Committee, but the complaint today is that this committee has become too autocratic.

The old Indian legend of "The Mirror in the Waters," taken from the lore of the Iroquois tribe, will be retold by Francis D. Bowman, as a prologue to a concert by the Caribou band on the Columbia chain Saturday from 9 to 9:30 p. m.

The "Romance of the Reclamation of Metals" will be told by G. H. Clamer, president of the Ajax Metal Company of Philadelphia, in a talk over the Columbia Broadcasting System Saturday from 7:15 to 7:30 p. m.

A chucker of the polo game between the West Point officers and the Cincinnati Riding club will be broadcast by WJW Saturday at 9:15 p. m. with Colonel Bob Newhall at the microphone.

Justin Adams' four-act drama of western life, "Trails," or "Beyond the Rockies," will be revived and broadcast by the Hank Simmons Show Boat stock company over the Columbia network Saturday from 10 to 11 p. m.

Meter Readers To Look Like Bell-Hops Here

If a uniformed man dressed like a theater usher knocks on your door, don't turn the dog loose or call the police department. It more than likely will be one of the meter readers of the Ohio Fuel Gas Co. who after Monday will wear brightly colored uniforms on duty.

The uniforms, similar to those worn by meter readers for gas companies in many cities, resemble the regulation U. S. army officers' uniforms, excepting in color which is a deep blue. The puttees, belt and shoulder straps are in colors. The words "Gas Company" are inscribed across the front of the hats. One of the objects of outfitting meter readers in uniforms, gas company officials point out, will be to prevent unauthorized persons posing as meter readers to gain entrance to houses. Meter readers in rounding towns in which the Ohio Fuel Gas Co. furnishes service will be furnished with similar uniforms to those used here.

An Urgent Appeal For Contributions To MARION COUNTY'S $5000.00 QUOTA IN THE NATION'S DROUTH RELIEF PROGRAM

This is a need which we of Marion County can realize and understand. While locally we have not been seriously afflicted by drouth, Meigs, Ross, Adams, Highland, Vinton, Lawrence, Fayette and Gallia counties of our own state are in serious condition.

Ohio's share of the national burden will be $998,000 and Marion County's quota is $5,000.

This fund will be devoted exclusively to the distribution of food. The National Congress is taking care of the need for seed for planting.

We have always listened sympathetically to calls for the relief of distress or suffering regardless of its source and we haven't a doubt that this present urgent emergency will be no exception. If everyone will respond promptly according to their means the quota will quickly be reached.

An appeal will be made in practically every church in Marion county tomorrow.

PASTOR PLANS SERMON SERIES

Rev. Karl W. Patow of Prospect Street M. E. Church Lists Topics.

A series of sermons on "Glimpses of the Hereafter" will be preached by Rev. Karl W. Patow, pastor of the Prospect Street M. E. church, beginning Sunday night of our time. Not far from the entrance to a European cemetery, Rev. Patow decided upon his sermons.

"Make life on earth real comfortable and fine. For death ends everything on every line."

In speaking of this series, Rev. Patow said:

"Similar thoughts are expressed in magazine articles and books, and by educators and others of our time. Not far from the entrance to a European cemetery, Rev. Patow decided upon his sermons."

"However, the idea, and belief in a future life can be taught off so easily. It is deeply imbedded in human thought. There are strong national grounds for such belief, and scripture does not only speak of a future life as reality, but ever holds it before every believer as a blessed hope."

"Being convinced that since human beings must sooner or later pass out of this life, most people would like to know something about the hereafter. I will attempt in three Sunday night messages to give a few 'Glimpses of the Hereafter' on the following subjects: Jan. 25, 'Do We Live on After Death or Is Man Immortal?'; Feb. 1, 'Where Are the Dead?'; Feb. 8, 'Will There Be a Last Judgment?'

All Doubt Banished

A SERMONETTE
BY REV. PAUL H. BOUQUIN
Pastor of Salem Evangelical Church
Text: Isaiah 55: 8-9

As we review the affairs of our past life, and the lives of others, we know and as we consider God's dealings with the nations of this world, we often are puzzled. We come across so many things that we can not understand. Sometimes we may be inclined to doubt the wisdom and justice of God's providence. We often find success where we expected failure, and failure where we expected success, suppression and defeat of a good cause, and victory of a bad cause; all kinds of reverses for good and faithful people, success and prosperity however for people we consider bad. The following story is a striking illustration of our text and will perhaps clear up some doubts as to all-wise and ever loving intentions of God.

Some hermit was lying at the door of his hut, and said to himself: "I have lived long enough in this world to know that it is full of dishonesty and unrighteousness, and I can not make myself believe that God's ways and dealings are always good and wise."

While he was musing in that way, he fell asleep and had a dream; he heard a voice from Heaven saying "Get up, John, and go out into the world. I'll show you the ways of God."

He got up, took his staff and went out into the woods, and wandered about until he was lost. He did not know where he was nor in what direction to go. He began to call and call, hoping that some one might hear him. Suddenly a strange man appeared and said to him: "Come with me, you never will find your way out of this woods."

So they started together and towards evening they came to a house, knocked at the door and were received very kindly by the man living there. He gave them food to eat and a bed to sleep on and he said: "I feel happy today and I am celebrating. I have a neighbor who for a long time was my bitter enemy and today he came over to make up and as a token of our friendship he gave me this beautiful cup of gold."

The next morning they thanked their kind host and wished him "God speed." But the hermit noticed that his companion secretly went to the cupboard, took the gold cup, put it in his bundle and started to go. That aroused the hermit's anger and he tried to interfere. But his companion said: "Hush, those are God's ways."

Then they came to another house. The man who lived here was an unfriendly miser. He scolded and cursed about the unwelcome guests and did what he could to annoy them. "We must go, we can not stay here," said the companion. But before he went, he presented that beautiful cup to the miser miser. "What are you doing?" said the hermit. But his companion put his finger to his mouth and said: "Hush, those are God's ways."

Towards evening of the second day, they got to the house of another man. This was a good man, but he was very sorrowful. He said, as much as I have been trying, and as hard as I have been working, I cannot accomplish anything. I had to sell one piece of property after the other, and now I have nothing left but this broken-down shack. "God will help you," said the companion. But before he left, he took a match and put fire to the house. "Hold on," said the hermit and tried to prevent. The companion said: "Hush, those are God's ways." And the house burned to the ground.

On the evening of the third day, they arrived at another house. The man here received them, but was not very friendly. He seemed to be interested in nothing else but his little son. The hermit thought that was very nice of him. As they were ready to leave the next morning, the man said, "I can not go with you, but I'll send my little boy to show you the bridge across the stream. But be careful that nothing happens to the child."

"God will protect the boy," said the companion. As they came to the bridge the little boy intended to go back to the house, but the companion said: "No, go ahead of us over the bridge." As they got on the center of the bridge the man grabbed the boy, and threw him into the water.

That was too much for the hermit. He cried out: "You miserable hypocrite! I will much rather starve in the lonely forest and let the wild beasts tear me to pieces, than to go one step farther with you. Are those God's ways you are showing me? You are a liar."

But at that moment the companion turned into a bright shining angel and said: "Listen, John, the cup which I took from that kind man was poisoned, and now that mean miser will drink out of it, and will die as a punishment for his wickedness. That poor industrious man will build up his house again and under the ashes he will find a treasure which will make him rich. The man whose child I threw into the foaming water was a bad character and he was spoiling the child, and the child would have become a murderer. Now the loss of the child will turn the father's heart to repentance and the child is well taken care of in God's hands. You doubted the wisdom and justice of God's ways. Now I hope you understand." And with that the angel disappeared. The hermit awoke and was cured from all doubts.

ing to Stuckert and when he reached the top a volley from a shotgun was fired, striking him in the chest.

Drawing his own gun, Davenport fired back and then walked down the stairs where he collapsed. He told Stuckert "to arrest them, don't shoot."

Walter Wounded
Walter Ralls was wounded in the shoulder by the single shot fired by Davenport. He was not seriously injured, however.

Davenport was taken to the Crestline emergency hospital where he died two hours later. He remained conscious until just a short time before he died.

Stuckert told the prosecutor this morning that Davenport, before he died, named Walter as the member of the trio firing the shot.

After the shooting, the three men discontinued to show resistance and their arrests were effected without further trouble.

White Confers with Aids on Road Shift

Cecil R. Leavens, county surveyor, who was in the Marion delegation. There are no first-class hotels between Mansfield and F. Wayne, Ind., over the proposed new routing, a stretch of 185 miles, while at Gallon, Marion, Kenton and Lima, cities on the present routes, there are numerous first-class hotel accommodations, he pointed out.

The route from Mansfield to Delphos through Marion is 107 miles and the proposed new route is 97 1/2 miles, he said. The latter runs through miles of desolate country, he declared.

Leavens also pointed out that route 30, which is known from coast to coast as the Harding highway, runs through the city where the late President Harding, after whom the route was named, lived and where he is now buried. Any change from the present routing would detract from the significance of the highway's name, he said.

The delegations stressed to the governor the efforts now being made to improve the present routing. They told of the new four-mile stretch of concrete east of Marion, which they said is one of the best sections of highway in the state.

Gugler, who acted as spokesman for the four delegations, which numbered 100 men and women, declared that former Governor Cooper had promised the interested cities that nothing would be done during his administration to change the present route. Cooper violated this promise, he said, by withdrawing from federal highway officials at Washington his objection to the proposed change.

White's stand on the matter is expected to be announced soon since the national association of state highway officials will take up the proposed change at its meeting next week in Chicago, Leavens said.

County Commissioners O. W. Kinnaman, O. C. McQuiddy and Wesley M. King led the local delegation, other members of which were W. H. It is being pointed out that unemployment has increased 1,823,376 in England under the Labor government. True! But what does this tell? It might have been a million less or a million more under some other party rule.
Who shall say?

The steamship, Republic, carrying contract bridge players, has arrived in Havana, the players having completed a tournament on the way down from New York. We know some ardent contract fans, but as yet they have not reached the stage of the disease where it is necessary to their happiness that they charter an ocean steamship to give them uninterrupted opportunity to play the game.

A bill has been introduced in the Minnesota legislature to restore capital punishment, abolished in that state in 1911. Twenty years have served to show that there's a wide gap between theory and practice in results of the substitution of prison terms for hanging.

Action by the lower house of congress on the senate's $25,000,000 appropriation for relief for drought sufferers has been postponed indefinitely to await the result of the Red Cross drive for $10,000,000, which the Red Cross holds is being retarded by the senate's appropriation. In their insistence that they have their way in opposition to the President, the senate radicals may yet succeed in starving
the people of the drought areas.

Senator Brookhart wants the nomination of

It was inevitable that Smith Wildman would dent's choice, even though his particular choice of obstacles was not known.

Detroit police raided a veritable arsenal,
operated by the "Sequoia Importing company," within a block of the city hall, in which they found a great stock of ammunition and over 200 guns, among them being machine guns, automatic rifles and shotguns and a German make of automatic pistol fitted with drum magazines making them capable of being fired thirty-two times without reloading. Detroit thugs, gangsters and gunmen must be buying their weapons on the cooperative plan.

Let the World Prepare for Peace.

The Earl of Beauchamp, Liberal leader in the British house of lords and chancellor of London university, apparently viewed America and Americans through different glasses than those customarily worn by his fellow-countrymen when visiting the United States.

Following an extensive tour of this country,
he told a New York City gathering, a few nights ago, of his admiration for the external proofs of the energy and adaptability of the American people. He said that he admired our cities and our magnificent buildings, but that he admired still more the underlying spirit of the American people. France, the Earl of Beauchamp said, gave the world liberty, England gave the world representative government, and the United States, with its idealism—and the degree of its idealism is great—will bring new standards for the progress of the world.

It was at this point that the titled Britisher brought up the subject of world peace and voiced a bit of sentiment worthy of consideration. Recalling how Premier Ramsay MacDonald had sought first the assistance of the United States looking to the peace of the world, than which there can be no greater objective, he went on to say that it is all right to speak of social reform, but that social reform is useless if civilization itself is to end, and continued:

"A new war might very well end civilization as we know it. It is as foolish to talk social reform if we do not work for peace as it would be for sailors to decorate the saloon of a sinking ship. There is no more foolish saying than 'In time of peace prepare for war.'
Rather let us prepare for peace."

This is the point which we wish to bring out. Isn't it possible, isn't it a fact, that the world has been too intent, in time of peace, in preparing for war? Might it not mean more for the future peace of the world—would it not, in fact—if the nations of the earth would paraphrase the old slogan to "In time of peace, prepare for peace?" When the world is committed to this view, the future peace of the world is as good as assured.

Compulsory Unemployment Insurance.

A natural accompaniment of unsettled economic conditions is a plentifulness of proposals, some good, some bad, some both. In the list before the public now, one stands out—compulsory unemployment insurance. It has reached that juncture in its development from which it may grow to an issue.

Senator Wagner, author of the Wagner unemployment bill, has sponsored a bill for cooperation between the federal government and the states for compulsory unemployment insurance.

It is important for considering what was considered a crack-brained theory a few years ago that the present practice of unemployment insurance be known. Abroad, it is found in Great Britain, Germany, Italy, Australia, Russia and Poland. At home, according to an estimate by Herome Davis, 255,000 American workers are protected by it. It is far from an untried theory, though little known publicly.

The system of payment regarded most favorably distributes the burden equally among the employer, the employee and the state. Bills introduced in state legislatures from time to time either have fallen into this class, or have advocated placing the entire burden on the employer. It is argued in behalf of the latter arrangement that it has proved successful in workmen's compensation, that it rewards employers who can stabilize employment within their establishments and penalizes those who don't.

It is well, also, to realize some of the evils of unemployment insurance. First, in England and Germany, both of which collect insurance funds on a pro rata basis from the employer, the employee and the state, unemployment insurance, due to the defection of the employer and the employee, has degenerated into little more than a dole.
This is unquestionably demoralizing, tending to persuade workers that the state owes them a living. In Germany the assessment amounts literally to a prohibitive tax on industry.

Second, employers would feel under less obligations to keep up their payroll if there were a fund to care for those whom they dismissed. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, has said:
"What we want here in the United States is to provide opportunities for men and women to earn their living and not be objects of charity."

Third, unemployment insurance would have to be administered by individual states, and unless all states accepted it at once there would be important inequalities unfavorable to the states which had adopted it.

In theory, unemployment insurance offers great promise; in practice, it is far from successful. Its aim is to relieve human misery, but that had better be attempted through industrial coordination and encouragement of management to assume those responsibilities embodied in the practice of unemployment
insurance.

A University of Wisconsin professor urges that the United States enter the League of Nations to save Europe, which, he holds, is on the verge of revolution. Sounds somewhat like a lot of the propaganda unloaded upon this country to hasten our entrance into the World war.

Pavlova, Premier Danseuse.

Anna Pavlova was more than a dancer to her friends in America. She was a symbol of the thing whose lack many of them felt keenly—this grand artist who softened life with delightful touches of the airy poetry of physical motion. No dancer, before her had captivated so completely the hearts and fancies of the nation. In no immature way, Anna Pavlova helped awaken America's artistic consciousness.

So it is that her death is scarcely an event to be described as might be the death of an ordinary notable. To millions in the cities, towns and villages of the United States she was less a flesh-and-blood figure than an illusion, a muse who led them off the rocky road of toil to enjoy an incomparable interlude in the byways of fancy. The name, the things it represented in the American mind and the new vistas it opened rest undisturbed. Pavlova lives on in her worshippers' minds.

Another generation, perhaps, and she will have been forgotten, but not yet. While there remain alive those who saw her dance, those who marveled at the transformation of a woman into a floating, gliding, whirling wraith of grace, Anna Pavlova will live.

If Robert E. Rogers knows what he is writing about, "our public schools teach the cult of the mediocre, the doctrine of the rightness of the majority, the sacredness of the average." Well, aren't they supposed to represent the great majority?

The Rev. Dr. Daniel A. Polling, of New York, in addressing the Ohio Pastors' association assembled in Columbus, rapped the Wickersham report on prohibition, speaking of it as "high and low, wet and dry, makes everybody happy and nobody glad." That's the trouble. The ardent dries are dissatisfied because it wasn't dry as tinder and the ultra wets are displeased
because it wasn't so wet that liquid would run out of it. Neither is capable of appreciating anything which is fair to the other.

The suit of Colonel Zack Miller, of the 101 Ranch show, to recover $325,000 by way of damages for the failure of To a Mix to live up to an alleged contract to appear with the 101 Ranch show, is not any affair of ours, but from the impression made by Mr. Mix when he appeared here with another show,
we can not help feeling that the colonel's estimate of the damage done his organization is somewhat excessive.

Two bills carrying marriage restrictions were introduced in the general assembly this week.
Senator Ackerman, of Cleveland, would empower license clerks to compel applicants for marriage licenses to produce documentary evidence of their age when there is ground for doubt, and Representative Amend would have five days elapse between the application for a license and its granting. It is hard to see objection to either bill, and, anyway neither bill is of interest to the great host of us who are happily married.

WHAT THOUGHT DOES.

Editorial Opinion.

A DECLINING 1930 TRADE BALANCE.
A decline of $2,737,000,999 in American foreign trade in 1930 is revealed in records of the department of commerce. Of this a little more than half, probably, can be attributed to price declines. The remainder is due to the closing of foreign markets.

The largest export decrease was in automobiles. The decline from 1929 was fifty per cent. Other substantial losses were recorded in wheat and flour, cotton, petroleum and petroleum products, copper, chemicals and tobacco.

These, it is interesting to note, are products of our leading industries. And to the loss of foreign markets for them is rightly attributed a large part of the decreased industrial activity of the country.

It has been accepted for many years that American prosperity is dependent in very large measure on our ability to find foreign markets for surplus goods. Normally our exports do not constitute more than ten per cent of total production, but selling that ten per cent abroad at good prices is the difference between near-capacity operations and painful cutbacking in some of our most important industries and deficits.

In the light of the record of 1930 the importance of finding whatever measures are necessary to rehabilitate foreign trade is apparent. If, as there is good reason to believe, high tariffs and other obstructions to world commerce are responsible in large measure for declining foreign trade, our tariff policy ought to be reconsidered in the light of existing conditions.

Restoration of foreign trade is essential to the re-establishment of normal business and economic conditions throughout the world. It is high time it was receiving the attention
it deserves.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

PERIL OF BEING A "YES" NATION.

The issue is whether or not private property can be taken from one set of citizens and given to another set, for a purpose never contemplated under our form of government?
Already the cry has gone up: "If food is to be provided for the rural districts of Arkansas, why shall not congress provide it for the people of New York City?" Indeed, why not?
And if congress provides it for New York,
why not for Lansing? And if congress may provide food for some of us here in Lansing, why not for all? Why not everybody get work and let congress feed, clothe and house us?

No one wants the people in Arkansas or anywhere else to starve. If past experience is any test of American disposition they will not be allowed to starve. America heretofore has not only met every demand of the kind, in the right way, here in our own nation, but we have even met demands on the humanitarian instinct from the far sides of the globe.

Once the precedent is set, once the bars are let down, once the power of government are permitted to act, and never intended there is no telling where the tendency will stop. Grasping minorities, armed with sentimental causes of one kind or another, will never cease and there will be all too few in congress willing to oppose demands of the kind. Our great difficulty in government is not that we are corrupt, but rather that we are easy. We are rapidly becoming a "yes" nation under one specious claim or another.

To be always saying "yes" is more ruinous to the nation than war, pestilence or famine.—

Tomorrow's Doctor.

BY ARCHIBALD HENDERSON.
The triumph of specialization in all forms of scientific research in recent times has had some remarkable results. It has resulted in the extraordinary influence exerted by the practice of "group medicine." A clinic of specialists is formed. A patient is subjected to a series of separate examinations by each of these various specialists. Ultimately, in the great majority of cases, the seat of the illness or malady is located, studied, identified, treated and it may be, and often is, cured.
The inevitable result of this drive towards universal specialization has been the tendency toward the gradual disappearance of the general practitioner. The good old family doctor we all knew and loved in our youth, with his gentle smile, his hopeful air, his uplifting "beside manner" is gone. Is he never to return?
And by his disappearance, what have we lost?

The one great asset of this type of physician was the powerful effect which his all-pervasive optimism had upon the patient. Whether he knew at the outset what ailed his patient or not, he took the indispensable step, which contemporary medicine indorses. He succeeded, so far as might be possible with the temperament of the individual patient, in removing anxiety at the outset. The latent powers of endurance of the patient are thus summoned to the rescue. The patient allies himself vigorously with the doctor in a united effort for recovery. The salutary and life-giving energies of the patient are released for his betterment.

"Once upon a time," says R. M. Wilson, "the priest was the doctor; tomorrow the doctor may well become the priest, in a new sense of the word. At least, he will see to it that his patient is free from gloom and anxiety, and possesses all the confidence and support which the world can afford him."

The "quick" often achieves remarkable "cures." This is the result, in most cases, of his loudly expressed faith in a cure. The patient morally glides up his loins; and vigorously assists in fighting the battle for health and life. This is the unquestioned strength, the curative force, of mental healing. By removing the fear complex, they succeed in enlisting all the vital forces of the patient on their side. And that, do not doubt it, is the side of recovery.

In his little book, "The physician of the future will not, as is now universally assumed, be a scientist of the orthodox type, a man with the technique of laboratories at his fingers' ends,
and with the aim in his mind of elucidating the phenomena of life in terms of chemistry or physics. Rather, he will be a humanist, a man with the widest possible knowledge of human nature, and the deepest, possible understanding of human motives. He will be a cultured man, ripe in intellectual attainments, but not lacking in emotional sympathy, a lover of arts as well as a student of the sciences. This is, indeed, no more than a projection into the future of a gracious figure of the past, the great physician of olden days were all, likewise great citizens of humanity. Yet the projection is, I think, justified by reason of the very scepticism it is sure to abuse. I look forward to the time when the practice of medicine will include, within its scope, every influence of known potency over the human spirit, and when the practitioner, like Pygmalion, will look on his work and see, not a man,
but a statue, the glowing image of life."

Thyroid Gland Is Below Par.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
Today I want to tell you about a condition called "Hypothyroidism." You will recall that in a recent article I told about "Hyperthyroidism," a disease commonly known as "Goiter." Hypothyroidism differs from hyperthyroidism in that in the former there is a deficiency in the thyroid secretion. The prefix "hypo" refers to the decrease and "hyper" to an increase.

When we speak of hypothyroidism, then,
we imply that there is an increase in the secretions of the thyroid gland. This increase usually manifests itself by enlargement of the thyroid gland, which you will recall is located in the front of the neck, adjoining the Adam's apple. There is loss of weight, rapid pulse, marked sweating and trembling of the hands.
These various symptoms are thought to be due to an increase in the secretions of the thyroid gland.

In hypothyroidism we have a different picture. Persons with hypothyroidism are not really ill, they simply feel below par. They know something is wrong, for they do not feel as well as they should.

Excessive weariness and fatigue following any exertion are the chief complaints, in spite of rest and vacation the weariness and fatigue return. There is a "loss of the pep" these individuals formerly possessed.

Other signs are confusing, but they must be considered. There may be underweight or overweight. It is not uncommon to observe constipation, susceptibility to colds and infections, vague aches and pains, and, at times, a general feeling of soreness in the abdomen.
This condition of hypothyroidism is often masked by means of a special test. By this application the doctor can determine whether our bodies are working at a slow or rapid rate. To borrow terms from our golfing friends
—it will be determined whether we are below
par, above par, or at par.

In hypothyroidism the score is above par.
In the condition that I am talking about today, hypothyroidism, it is below par. No disease, therefore, is being made up of diagnosis of hypothyroidism is made up of less there is definitely demonstrated that the doctor calls a lowered "basal metabolism rate."

Your physician will be happy to enlighten you about this fascinating and important subject. If he thinks it necessary he will advise this test for you.

These conditions of hypo and hyperthyroidism are of particular importance for those who live in the Great Lakes basin. In this region diseases of the thyroid gland are most common.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES.

MRS. P. BELL. Q.—How can I gain weight?
A.—Proper dieting and deep breathing are the secret. You should eat nourishing foods and have plenty of sleep and rest.

A READER. Q.—What can be done for bags or puffs under the eyes?
A.—Constipation, dissipation, lack of sleep
or a heart or kidney condition may be responsible. It would be advisable to consult your physician for an examination.

THANK YOU (M. M.). Q.—Can tuberculosis be contracted through kissing on the mouth?
A.—Yes.

PLEASE. Q.—What is somnambulism?
2.—What can you tell me about gout?
3.—Do you advise treatment for styes?
A.—The scientific name for sleep-walking is somnambulism.

2.—Gout is a disease associated with rich food—overeating, overindulging in sweet wines and malt beverages, and especially because the tendency to gout is inherited the same as riches—it is called a rich man's ailment. It is probably due to an excessive amount of uric acid in the blood.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. MINTYRE.
New York, Jan. 24—I don't know what happened, but I awakened with an electric start and for what seemed an age remained there, peering into the blackness. My scalp itched to the taunt of a snare drum's beat.
Somewhere in the void was a presence!

As a sheer bluff I whispered hoarsely to my wife: "Hand me the revolver!" And she spilled everything by drawing a revolver.
"What revolver? Go to sleep." Any second I expected a couple of hairy paws to reach out, grasp my throat and throttle the day-lights out of me. I choked so easily.

Any one with my kind of an Adam's Apple does. The wildest thoughts raced through my head. Why was I always smart cracking about the cowardice of gunmen? . . . Headline: "Writer Yells for Help and Drops Dead."
. . . May be I lost it all in the market and I'll be reasonable.

The while my wife breathed softly in the throes of gentle sleep. She would be so when aroused by a thunderous bloody blow and find me all crumpled up in the hall, perhaps smacked through the head! A curtain fluttered in the bathroom.

There, I thought, is his confederate chamberlain. That would be two of them now. And here I am with a wife sound asleep and a dead dog that has by awakened a revolting shock. Waken! I sucked to leave the room with a night watchman on each floor? Park avenue, my eye!

It is odd how inconsequential yet comforting fancies come to one in moments of un-despair. I was strangely soothed by the fact my watch was at a repair shop and two men couldn't carry out the piano. Maybe they were crying out of the cigar case Paul Wat-man gave me.

Another window curtain fluttered in the hall. Heavens, that would be three! Probably there were already one or two waiting in closets. It occurred to me I remembered seeing the lid on a wicker clothes basket move earlier in the evening. That would be still another!

Wouldn't it be funny if the clothes basket one was found suffocated? . . . I was hysterical, but I almost chuckled. All the dogs smelly cast off blankets were in there.
Also other discarded and perhaps fragrant what nots.

But what to do! Cautiously I raised myself to a sitting position, slowly reached out my hand toward the night table, snapped on the light and squeaked in a surprising falsetto
"What are you doing there?" My wife sat up blinking to inquire: "In Heaven's name, what are you doing?" . . . I puffed.
Are you losing your mind? I puffed.
My fingers to my lips and shook my head. "You look like a chunk of white chalk!" And just about then the deaf dog barked by the flare of light, stretched, hopefully of his basket and onto the bed with rubber ball in his mouth. With a house full of burglars, that fool would want to play.

I began to try to whisper another warning to my wife. Poor soul, she didn't know what I was all about. I gave her a withering glance. She flopped back on the pillow.
I could only reach the outside hall and summon the elevator man! I made the effort walking stiffly as though expecting a crash on the conk any second. Going through the hall I announced: "It's no use boys. I've turned in the burglar alarm. The police will be here any minute." And as a bright idea thought added: "If you hurry you might get away!" . . . Nothing happened. And by then the scalyham and what a big help he had been too?—joined us with his rubber ball and all set for a frolic. It's that way around this house. Anytime I grow restless, everbody begins to skylark. It wouldn't have surprised me if the cook turned on the graphophone at 4 in the morning.

Well, anyway, there wasn't a burglar.
I may have been nightmare, hallucination or plain nuttiness. But they'd better leave me alone. I'd just been in one of these unusually quiet moods. Last time I was like that I slammed a copy spike at a city editor, the next rubs it in by talking to the dogs in the wife room. Such as: "Go hunt the bold, bad burglars!" And I'm not so fussed as I think. I often get up and put on my trousers backward this way.—Copyright, 1931, M.

A Washington Daybook.

BY HERBERT PLUMMER.
Washington, Jan. 24—Wandering aimlessly through the quartermaster's depot, almost lost in a maze of very old-fashioned horse carriages, which formerly were part of the transportation equipment of the White House.
They had gathered dust for years in the stables of the executive mansion until President Hoover ordered them away. Henry Ford is said to have wanted them, but the vigilance of the quartermaster prevented.

So the aged, but by no means infirm, vehicles were transferred to the depot, along with the silver mounted harness that goes with them.
There they will remain until some plan of disposition is decided. Probably they will be retained as government souvenirs of a bygone era.

They have been removed from the list of army surplus property. And they stand there

MUCH WARMER IN JAIL, NEGROES FIND

Open Campfire in Warehouse Lends Pair in City Lockup; Firemen Called.

During an open fire in the basement of a vacant $25,000 store room at 1000 Broadway and Darius street, two Negroes were in custody this morning for carelessness which officials say might have caused the three-story building to burn.

Persons residing in the neighborhood called the fire department when smoke rolled out of the window of the building. Firemen from two Negroes stretched on the floor enjoying the warmth of their open campfire.

They were taken to city prison immediately after their temporary release was discovered by firemen at 10:30 p.m. yesterday. They probably will be released and ordered out of town today.

Ninety couples enjoyed the dance program. The hall was lighted from flood lights reflected on a large snowball which centered the hall and crepe paper hangings and imitation snow completed the decorations. Favors were suggestive of the winter season.

Just Things

—BY EDNA S. DUTTON—

S. O. S.

FASHION dictators might amaze a fortune and by the same token do a heap good turn to the w. g. whose dogs trek out in the ashen dawn, by inventing some sort of a device to keep the particles of soot from lodging on her velvety cheek, her reticulate nose or in the vicinity of her shell pink ear. Distance means nothing; the smudge is acquired early in the stepping out whether one only rounds the corner to one's business or does a constitutional of a mile or more. One doesn't mind if the smudge lands where it can't be seen by the smudge, but it looks something like a ton of coal when it lights within vision, so you folks of an inventive mind, here's your chance. As a suggestion, why not create some sort of a hat ornament that will start something of a windmill motion as the wearer gains momentum and fan the particles away. One might go further and arrange some sort of a musical contraption, by way of being unique.

Once in a Lifetime

THIS bridge crossing business before arriving at the bridge is all the bunk if any one happens to be curious to know. Every one knows the courage it takes to visit your favorite dentist's office. It may be a nice office but that doesn't lessen the pangs, for with all the downy cushions and soft chairs there's always a thought of the other chair. But get this: think of getting all courage up, going to the dentist's office, sitting in the chair and then hearing what amounts to "bless you my erstwhile customer, go, there's not a molar in the shop that has anything on yours." The sensation, experienced once in a lifetime, is something akin to the one which accompanies the receiving of one's high school diploma, and it is with difficulty one refrains from breaking forth with loud whoops as they don their goshaws and other equipment for a hasty retreat. The goodnights are genuinely sincere but coming out of the pink clouds and treading the asphalt, one wonders if there wasn't a sort of an "I'll get you yet" gleam lurking in the dentist's eye as you made your bow, which takes all the joy out of life by bringing to mind that old one about "he who laughs last."

Needles and Laces

THERE'S something about the advent of the springtime that fills one with the urge to try their hand at playing a needle. It's a yen that affects some people only at this particular time of the year and then lies dormant for the remainder of the season. Storekeepers, who have kept a watchful eye on the customers and an alert ear to the ground for what they will turn to next, remember this season of the year was the time to get out the muslins, nainsook, dimities and such. There were folks in those days who bought muslin and cambric by the yard to say nothing of the bolts of dozens of different widths of laces. Oh, well after all it was a gay life.

Lowly Cucumber Takes Spot As Mild Bleach Treatment

BY JOSEPHINE HUDDLESTON

The summer tan that persists on back and shoulders despite heroic treatments is the bane of many women this social season. For the new evening gowns are indeed low cut. So today we will continue our back-beauty suggestions. In the last article of this series we talked about the milder liquid bleaches. Here is one which is probably the most effective of all.

SPRING FROCKS

This frock of gingham with jacket blouse of white pique repeats the scalloped edging of the blouse in the pique hat to match. The skirt's plaid pattern is followed in belt and tie.

Cucumber bleach is the last of the mild lotions. There is more work in the preparing of it, but you can make up enough of the preparation at one time to last for a number of treatments. To make this bleach two lotions are necessary: Cucumber Essence—Chop six large, ripe cucumbers and cover them with an amount of alcohol equal to their own bulk. Let this stand for twelve hours and then strain off the liquid through a double layer of cheesecloth. The second lotion: Cucumber Juice—Chop up half a dozen rather large cucumbers and let them simmer over a slow fire until they are soft. Be sure to turn the flame low and keep the pan covered so none of the juice will be lost. When the cucumbers are really, remove them from the fire and strain off the juice through a double layer of cheesecloth. You are now ready to make the bleaching lotion itself.

Shave one-half ounce of olive oil soap and add to this four ounces of the cucumber essence stirring until the soap has melted. Add five ounces of sweet almond oil, twelve ounces of the cucumber juice. Put the two liquids into a large glass bottle and shake briskly for ten minutes. Then slowly add two ounces of rose water and one dram of benzoin.

To use the bleach, apply liberally to the skin after washing it with lukewarm water and a bland soap such as castile. Rub the skin thoroughly. Then dry and apply the cucumber lotion, letting it dry into the skin.

CHAPTER 20
Triumph Turns to Terror

When Alleen, Vivienne, and Jimmy arrived at the hospital, Alleen was standing on the steps with Doctor Saunders. The doctor had been showing him through the various wards, and it was evident that Alleen had been through all that he saw. But even his compassion for the situation of the inmates failed to hide his satisfaction over the presence of the camera-men who were there to film the scene. Now he and Saunders posed with Alleen, and Alleen was as proud as Punch. What a whole of an advertisement for him to be in the news-reef with the mystery star! On the air and on the screen, his Parum Masque would soon be known to millions of people.

That thought made him generous. Dr. Saunders already had checked for a handsome contribution. He was finding the prospect of personal exploitation as pleasing as the profits his business acumen secured.

"Now," said Saunders, "suppose we go in. The children can hardly contain themselves, and I must say they are a sight to see."

Vivienne glanced at Jimmy. The same idea dawned on him. Why the devil hadn't he thought before of this possibility? Emilie Gluck was a widow, rich as Croesus and susceptible—the type who would leave his fortune on a girl like Vivienne or Alleen if she gave him half a chance. Viv might, but Alleen wouldn't.

It was not Gluck, however, who caused Jimmy to ponder. He could never conceive of Alleen as an old man's darling, but there was the slightest doubt that Saunders, appealed to her. Likewise, it was evident that whether or not he suspected himself, the doctor was in love. Jimmy was almost inclined to laugh at his own stupidity. He had certainly done his best to make Alleen unobtainable. But then it didn't matter. If he could see her happy, that alone would be worth while. Maybe he'd better make up to some other girl and rush her around a bit. Then Alleen wouldn't hesitate on the ground of hurting him.

Every child in the bright auditorium began to exclaim at once when Doctor Saunders lead Alleen out upon the platform. She could see crutches and braces, and strange looking strapped contrivances that held up wabbly heads—kiddies of varying ages, some of them in wheel-chairs and a few on roller-cots.

If their little faces showed signs of pain, their eyes were big as saucers. They began clapping gleefully when Saunders started to explain to them that this was the mystery lady they had heard on the radio.

"But she isn't a mystery to us," he said, "because she is with us this afternoon, and the song she is going to sing for us is one that you all know."

Even more self-conscious than before the microphone, Alleen began as Jimmy played her accompaniment. The children listened spellbound, trying their best to believe that her voice was the one that came over the air.

"Sally, baby, Sally,"
"Out upon that sea!"

Alleen's voice rang clear. Her very soul was in it, and her heart went out to these poor youngsters—each of them facing a handicap almost as pitifully tragic as the one her mask concealed. But they'd no need to hide their faces! And Saunders had said that many of them would be cured in time. Nevertheless, her sympathy was registered in every note as Alleen entertained them.

When, at last, she had to pause, Jimmy Crane offered himself in the guise of a magician. His amusing patter, and his comic clumsiness in performing slight of hand tricks, made them call for more and more. Then Alleen sang to them again—this time Lezinski's "Valse"—and it was Dr. Saunders who listened to her with half-closed eyes, much as though he were dreaming of a singer far away.

"Won't you say just a word to them?" Saunders asked when she finished.

"Yes, indeed!" Alleen exclaimed. "I want to thank every one of you for listening to me so nicely, and perhaps, if you'd like me to, I'll come again some time. Anyway, I'll be thinking of you each time I'm on the air. Now we're going to have a treat that Mr. Gluck is giving you. Ice cream and cake—and candy. Isn't that going to be nice?"

Churches Came from Tombs

By The Schaffner-Queen Co.

Reverence for ancestors naturally brought about the idea of worshipping at burial places. The temples of ancient Greece and Rome originated with tombs of men, magnificently built.

Even the early Christian church was founded amidst tombs. The tombs of the Martyrs were the first altars upon which they solemnized the rites of their faith.

The remembrance of those who have passed on before always brings out the best that is in everyone—and lifts him to the noblest and most uplifting thoughts and ideals.

Sincerity and reverence are indispensable in the character and service of a funeral director. His profession requires of him more "human" traits than does the average business, as every little act of kindness he performs means much to those who are in distress.

"Heart of a Wife" BY ADELE GARRISON

Madge's Father Sees Owen Hand in the New Theatre.

My father had caught the slip I had made in speaking of Marion, and the lock-box, with its secret compartment, which she had inherited from her grandmother. He left me in no doubt about that when he stopped short in our slow progress to the house from the new lily pool, and faced me soberly.

"My dearest, if I am going to help you in this matter you must not withhold anything from me. Do you mean that Marion has shown the box to anyone else?"

"No, she hasn't," I said, "for the good reason that it was locked up in the bank deposit vault, where she could not get at it. But she has told her 'roomie,' Carolyn Brixton, about the box and its secret compartment—Marion does not know herself what is contained in the three envelopes which fill that compartment."

Father is startled.

"Carolyn Brixton," he repeated, "Of all people," he added, as if to himself, and I started violently. He knew, for I had told him, of my distrust of Carolyn Brixton, step-daughter, Samuel Brixton, and his half brother, Charles Owen, because of the attempt they had made to get Lillian to sign a 'release' for herself and Marion, of all claims as the name of Marion's dead father, Tom Morton, against Brixton, Morton's former business partner. The request had been plausibly and adroitly advanced as a side issue to a flamboyant proposition to restore twenty thousand dollars to Marion—money which Brixton, with an emotion which I felt was feigned, declared had been unjustly taken from his dead partner's estate.

I had been present at that interview, and it had been by my advice, for her husband would hear nothing of the Brixtons or their errand, so jealous was he of that long dead past of Lillian's—that she preferred either to accept the proffered money or sign any paper concerning it. When Marion was of age, Lillian told them, through me, she could decide for herself what should be done.

I acquitted Helena Brixton and her children, Carolyn and Ronald, of any conscious part in the scheme, which, I felt—perhaps fancifully—that Samuel Brixton and his half-brother, Charles Owen, were concocting against the girl's fortune. But I did not think it was an accident that had led Samuel Brixton to select Whitney Hall—Marion's school—as the establishment in which he wished to place Carolyn, and I felt that it was his influence, in part, which had abetted the close intimacy which existed between the two "roomies."

Several times since the attempted robbery at the farmhouse, there had come to me the fantastic theory that Samuel Brixton, or rather, Charles Owen, whom I considered the brainier and the more diabolical of the two, was behind that abortive search. Was it possible that my father was entertaining a similar suspicion?

"Do you mean—" I faltered.

"I mean nothing—now," he said, "except that more than ever I see many reasons why Lillian should be told this, and not one against the revelation."

With his hand upon my arm he accelerated our pace ever so slightly.

"I hate to ask you to hurry, dearest," he said, "but I must get down to the village as quickly as possible. I want a word with Underwood before I go, and I should advise you to see that both Richard and Lillian know about this as soon as possible. You must not carry any part of this burden any longer, my darling. You are not strong enough to be bothered with anything."

It was useless to contradict him, and I felt very much in the category of the frail fainting females of the seventies, as he took me back to the veranda and put me in my big chair.

"I shall not be long," he said, "and don't bother about anything, remember, until I get back."

There was no one on the veranda but Lillian, and she answered the question in my eyes.

"Mothering took the baby upstairs," she said, "your mother-in-law has gone to her room for her nap. Harry and Dicky have the boys downstairs in the playroom, and I suppose Mary and Marion have not yet exhausted the post-

way out in the river and under the other ice, but Banty floated and we pulled him out, and he would of froze but a man made us all go in the poor house where they dried him out. A man told him that anyone with any sense wouldn't of done what he done, and Banty said he knewed it. I bet he does. So do all of us.
